

COLLECTED WORKS OF F. MAX MÜLLER

G8408
Mangaldai College Central Library

NATURAL RELIGION

F. MAX MÜLLER

MANGALDAI COLLEGE LIBRARY

Accession No ... 8408 ...

Class No ... 210 ...

Book No ... MUL ...

Asian Educational Services
New Delhi

PRICE : Rs. 145

FIRST PUBLISHED : 18 89

FIRST ASIAN REPRINT . 1979

PRINTED IN INDIA

PUBLISHED BY J. JETLEY

FOR ASIAN EDUCATIONAL SERVICES

C-2/15, SDA, NEW DELHI-110016

PRINTED BY A.K. PROCESS AT

DELUXE OFFSET PRINTERS, NEW DELHI

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	PAGE
PREFACE	v
LORD GIFFORD'S WILL	vii

LECTURE I.

INTRODUCTORY LECTURE ON LORD GIFFORD'S BE- QUEST	1-26
---	------

LECTURE II.

DEFINITION OF RELIGION.

Definition of religion, why wanted.—Great differences in defining religion.—Is Buddhism a religion?—Definition of definition.—Etymological definition.—Historical definition.—Dogmatic definition.—Etymological definition of religio.—Historical definition of religio.—Later meanings of religio.—Dogmatic definitions.—Religion and theology.—Dogmatic and practical religion.—Comparative theology.—Schleiermacher's definition of religion.—Religion, either belief or body of doctrines . . . 27-50

LECTURE III.

EXAMINATION OF DEFINITIONS.

Natural and revealed religions.—Comparative theology.—Modus cognoscendi et colendi Deum.—Feeling or knowledge as motive of action.—The object of religion must be defined.—Fichte on atheism.—Goethe and Lavater.—Different classes of definitions.—Practical religion.—Kant.—Caird.—Pfleiderer.—Martineau.—Schenkel and Newman.—Theoretical religion.—Religion as sentiment or knowledge.—Teichmüller.—Author of

	PAGE
'Natural Religion.'—Goethe.—Mill.—Spinoza, 1632-77.—Schleiermacher, 1768-1834.—Hegel, 1770-1831.—Fichte, 1762-1814.—How to account for these different definitions	51-72

LECTURE IV.

POSITIVIST DEFINITIONS OF RELIGION.

Wundt.—Feuerbach.—Gruppe.—Selfishness as source of religion.—Gruppe's definition too narrow.—Universality of religion.—Angle of vision.—Darwin on Tierra del Fuego.—Niebuhr and Bunsen.—Lubbock v. Quatrefages.—Preconceived ideas.—Names for religion.—Words for religion in Chinese; in Arabic.—Dharma.—Veda.—Bhakti.—Sradhā, faith. 73-102

LECTURE V.

MY OWN DEFINITION OF RELIGION.

Is Buddhism a religion?—Buddhism, as theoretical, not included under any definition.—Māluṅkya-putta and Buddha.—Yamaka, on life after death.—Dialogue between the king of Kosala and the nun Khemā.—Buddhism, as practical, not included under any definition.—The doctrine of Karma.—Definition of religion.—Religion an experience.—Experience consists of sensations, percepts, concepts, and names.—Sensation and perception inexplicable.—The working of our mind.—No percept without language; Helmholtz.—Perceptions always finite.—Finite and definite—The finite implies the infinite.—The infinite in space.—The infinite in time.—The infinite as cause.—Misunderstandings.—Savages without words for finite and infinite.—The Duke of Argyll's definition of religion.—Early names of the infinite.—Mana.—Manito.—Does the Vedic religion begin with sacrifice?—Germs of the infinite in the Veda.—The infinitely great.—The infinitely small.—Infinite inseparable from finite.—The concept of cause . . . 103-140

LECTURE VI.

THE INFINITE IN NATURE, IN MAN, AND IN THE SELF.

Positivist objections.—Historical evolution.—Positivist point of view.—Rig-veda.—The dawn.—End and endless.—Endless in the Avesta.—Theogonic elements.—How the perception of the infinite led to religious ideas.—Tangible, semi-tangible, intangible objects.—Trees.—Mountains.—Rivers.—Earth.—Clouds, stars, moon, sun, sky.—Demi-gods and great gods.—The infinite in man as an object.—The something behind man.—The infinite behind man.—Religious ideas springing from it.—Animism.— Seelencult. —Strange names; Totemism.—The infinite in man as a subject.—Psychological deities.—Sense, imagination, intellect, language.— Devatās. — Âtmā. —Natural religion, as physical, anthropological, and psychological . . .	141-165

	PAGE

LECTURE VII.

RELIGION DIFFERENT FROM SCIENCE.

Religious character.—Religion and science.—What imparts a religious character.—Moral influences of physical phenomena.—Vedic prayers.—Early morality.—Moral influence of ancestral spirits.—Ancestral law in China.—Moral influence of psychological deities.—Temple to Mens. — Eros and Psyche. —Conscience.—Remorse.—Have we a conscience?—Sacrifices an element of religion.—Priesthood.—Study of the Veda.—Final definition of religion	166-191
--	---------

LECTURE VIII.

THE HISTORICAL METHOD.

Criticisms of my definition.—Pfeiderer.—Gruppe.—Religion a psychological necessity.—History v. Theory.—Theory.— Causalitas. — Eminentia. — Negatio. —Cosmological, teleological, ontological arguments.—Historical method.—Archaeology.—Theoretic school.—Historical school.—Study of language.—Historical school.— Acutus. —Theoretic school.—Brinton on palaeolithic language.—Advantages of both theories.—Science of religion.—Historical school.—Semitic, Aryan, Chinese religions.—Religions without books	192-220
--	---------

LECTURE IX.

HISTORICAL TREATMENT OF RELIGIOUS QUESTIONS.

Is religion possible?—History and theory inseparable.—Agnosticism.—Epicurean view of the gods.—Chance and purpose: Darwin.—Atheism.—Intuitive knowledge of the gods.—

Philosophical treatment.—Vision in the Bhagavadgītā.—	PAGE
Revelation.—Historical traces in the Veda.—The old problems in their simpler form	221-238

LECTURE X.

COMPARATIVE STUDY OF RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

Modern problems to be traced back.—Creation.—The logic of facts.—Cosmological argument.—Aryan savages.—Why?—Answers to the cosmological question.—Emanation.—Emanation or srishti.—Golden egg.—Teleological argument.—Anthropomorphism.—Ontological argument.—A creator.—Origin of the idea of cause.—Religions without a creator.—The theory of evolution.—Meaning of evolution.—Darwin admits a creator.—Herder, the precursor of Darwin.—Evolution in the beginning of our century.—Gottfried Hermann.—Kant on the Chimpanzee.—Darwin.—Oken.—Reaction.—Historical school, its true character.—Stanley.—Necessity of an historical study of religion.—Criticisms answered 239-279

LECTURE XI.

MATERIALS FOR THE STUDY OF NATURAL RELIGION.

Language, Myth, Customs and Laws, Sacred Books.—Language as evidence.—Survey of languages.—ARYAN FAMILY.—English.—Veda = oḷḍa.—Anglo-Saxon.—Gothic.—Continental Saxon.—Scandinavian.—Thorr and Thursday.—Týr and Tuesday.—Wodan and Wednesday.—High German.—Celtic.—Italic.—Hellenic.—Slavonic.—North-Western Division.—South-Eastern Division.—Indic class, Vedic Hymns, Brāhmanas, Sūtras, Pāṇinean Sanskrit.—Inscriptions of Piyadasi, third century B. C.—Buddhist Sanskrit.—Renaissance of Sanskrit literature.—Prākṛit.—Vernaculars.—Sacred Books.—Iranic class.—Cuneiform Persian inscriptions.—Pehlevi.—Bask, Etruscan.—SEMITIC FAMILY.—Aramaic.—Chaldaic and Syriac.—Hebraic.—Arabic.—Ethiopic 280-310

LECTURE XII.

PRINCIPLES OF CLASSIFICATION.

Languages not Aryan and not Semitic.—Morphological classification.—Genealogical as different from morphological

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xvii

PAGE

classification.—Degrees of relationship.—Morphological classification.—Radical stage.—Terminational stage.—Inflectional stage.—Transitions from one stage to another.—Chinese.—Rask's and Prichard's classification.—Vocalic harmony . 311-327

LECTURE XIII.

LANGUAGES NOT ARYAN AND NOT SEMITIC.

The Ural- Altaic family.—Samoyedic.—Altaic languages.—Lingusic class.—Mongolic class.—Turkic class.—Turkish grammar.—Finno-Ugric class.—Fins.—Estonians.—Tamulic languages.—Munda languages.—Taic languages.—Gangetic languages.—Lohitic languages.—Languages of Farther India.—Languages of the Caucasus.—Egyptian.—Africa.—America.—Oceanic languages.—Malay.—Polynesia.—Melanesia . 328-350

LECTURE XIV.

LANGUAGE AND THOUGHT.

What should we be without language.—Definition of thinking.—What are we thinking of?—Thinking in German or English.—Why we cannot think without words.—Communication, not language.—Images.—Involuntary and voluntary sounds.—The Bow-wow, Pooh-pooh, and Yo-heho theories.—Roots.—Words derived from conceptual roots.—Are concepts possible without words?—Berkeley.—Process of naming.—Origin of concepts.—Former theories.—The clamor concomitans.—The conceptual foundation of language.—Our conceptual world 351-384

LECTURE XV.

DYNAMIC STAGE.

Lessons of language.—Roots express our acts.—Some acts conceived as passive.—Subjective acts predicated of other agents.—Subjective acts predicated of objects.—Dynamic stage.—Animism.—Egypt.—Semitic names.—Finland.—Hidatsas in North America.—Growth of language.—Causality.—Objections answered.—Gender.—Dyaus, as a masculine . . . 385-410

LECTURE XVI.

MYTHOLOGY.

	PAGE
Myths.—Meaning of mythology.—Etymology of μῦθος .—Myth, a word.—Eos.—Mythology universal.—Comparative mythology and its three divisions.—Comparative philology.—Etymological school.—Analogical school.—Psychological school.—Comparative mythology.—A. Barth.—Etymological school.—Analogical school.—Psychological school.—I. The Etymological School.—Names of gods.—Dialectic varieties.—Obsolete names.—The Dawn.—Religious germs.—Moral germs.—Ahanâ = Athene.—Daphne.—Benfey's theory of Athene	411-447

LECTURE XVII.

THE GENEALOGICAL SCHOOL.

Identification and comparison.—Sarad and Ceres.—Mythological etymologies.—Changes in the character of gods.—Accidental similarities of names.—Foreign gods.—Mythological names which admit of no etymology.—The names of gods.—The etymological meaning must be physical.—Learned and popular etymologies of Greeks and Romans.—Haritas and Charites.—Fors, Fortuna.—Nomina and cognomina	448-483
---	---------

LECTURE XVIII.

THE ANALOGICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL SCHOOLS.

II. The Analogical School.—Characters common to gods and heroes of different names.—Rudra, Apollon, Wuotan.—Myths agreeing in one and differing in other names.—Varuna and Ormazd.—III. The Psychological School.—Völker-psychologie.—Advantages in England, India, Colonies, Missionary Societies.—Work done in America.—The true meaning of Manito	484-518
--	---------

LECTURE XIX.

ON CUSTOMS AND LAWS.

Materials for the study of customs and laws.—Customs based on religious ideas.—Customs generating religious ideas.—Sol-

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xix

	PAGE
lennis.—Annual festivals.—Istar and Tammuz.—Zeus Xenios.
—How customs should be studied	519-537

LECTURE XX.

SACRED BOOKS.

What is a sacred book?—The five birthplaces of sacred books.—Survey of sacred books.—India.—The Veda.—Buddhism.—Influence of the Kshatriyas, the nobility.—Media and Persia.—China.—Palestine.—Judaism.—Christianity.—Mohammedanism.—The Eight Religions.—Book-religions.—The invention of writing.—Influence of writing on religion.—Individual and national religions.—Mohammed.—Christ.—Buddha.—Confucius.—Lao-tze.—Zoroaster.—Moses.—Sacred books, when consigned to writing.—The founders of religions are never the writers of sacred books.—The Veda originally not written.—The Avesta originally not written.—The Tripitaka not Buddha's work.—Confucius, writer, not author, of the Kings.—The Old Testament.—The New Testament.—Mohammed could neither read nor write.—Religions with and without sacred books.—Conclusion 538-577

INDEX 579-608